

On Wavelength

Group calendar with heatmap voting plus a sport-coach workflow for 8 sports.

What it is

On Wavelength is a calendar app for iOS and Android with a feature that does not exist cleanly anywhere else: heatmap voting for group dates. Everyone in the circle taps their available times, the app computes the best shared slot, no "when works for you" ping-pong in the group chat. The second pillar is a full sport-coach workflow for 8 sports (soccer, volleyball, basketball, handball, hockey, badminton, tennis, running): plan trainings + matches, manage lineups, track live attendance, browse a drill library.

Who it is for

Two distinct audiences. Audience A: amateur sport coaches across the 8 sports above plus run clubs (highest converter, 3-5% reel-views to install). Audience B: flatshares, friend groups, families and productivity-curious creators with a real group-coordination problem (broader reach, ~0.5-1% conversion). Creators who sit well: garage-coach build-in-public, study-with-me reels, flatshare lifestyle accounts, drill-library TikTokers.

Why this works as an affiliate pitch

Sport coaches have an everyday pain (no-shows, lineup chaos, drill planning) and convert above average. A single coach brings 8-16 active users on average, so coach attribution compounds. The productivity / flatshare audience converts weaker but reach is much larger, which keeps the funnel filled between coach campaigns. Heatmap voting is the demo-able "only-here" feature that always pulls in screen-recording content.
